BEAR SHOOTING IN CANADA

The forest we had entered was a dense grove of cedars, mixed with spruce and pine. The trees stood close together, with low branches, and were plentifully interspersed with windfalls, lying breasthigh on rotten branches, and forming an admirable natural abatis against our advancing column of two armed with ax and shot-gun.

George moves on like a shadow straight for the squirrel that still chatters and scolds and swears from the depths of the cedar jungle. I veer to the right. We worm ourselves between the thick trunks, and under the thicker branches.

A low "Sh !" catches my ear. I turn toward George. "Here he is!" is written all over his face. He points directly ahead, then shakes his ax, and points and points nearn.

I look, stretch up and look cronch down and look, but see nothing save the tree-trunks.

George grows impatient. He thinks I do not understand him. "Le volci ! Here he is " he hisses.

But Benin hears as well as I. "Non to voila! There he goes !" I henen while and a grant that re mind me of a menagerie, and through the thick cedar trunks and the dead branches of a fallen pine catch a flitting glimpse of shambling blackness.

I fire a snap shot, as I would at a woodcock darting through the alder tops. The smoke hangs under the thick branches and shuts out all before me.

"He's down! Nous l'avons!" yells George. The report of the gun has broken the spell of the forest silence, and George changes from a serpent to a tiger.

'No," he cries; "he's off again.

I fire my left barrel through the smoke with the "eye of faith," and, cramming in a couple of fresh cartridges, George and I rush on, if any mode of progress through a tangled cedar swamp can be called a rush. We kick and wrest off the dry dead branches, scramble over the fallen pine; but the bear Nowhere a sign of him. Nothing but

George keeps on; I do my best to folow. He glides along like a cat, it. one hand an uplifted ax, descending now and then to seven an 'opposing bough. He gets over the ground two feet to my one.

"Le volla, qui s'en va! Therethe. goes again ! Vencz ! Come on !" cries George; and I perform the speediest coming on of which I am capable. Slow-enough it is, though. Every, few steps the tangled branches of a fallen cedar must be burst through, but on I press and scramble and tumble and crawl till. George is reached. He stands on a prostrate tree, ax upraised, head bent orward and to one side—an admirable statue of alertness.

"Ecoutez! Listen!" he whispers.

A moment's stillness. Then a crack ling, loud and near, up the hill-side, George jumps through the thicket, and springs up the slope like a flash. Follow him? I could as easily flit up to heaven without wings. So I scramble on through the level swamp. It is said "blood will tell;" I can swear that will. The burden of my 200 pounds handicapped me in this swamp race with a bear. Every thicket I crawled through, every windfall I sure."-Harper's Magazine. scrambled over, told on me, till at last I was forced to halt. With perspiration bursting from every pore, and breath ony caught in gasps, I leaned against a tree, and imagined the feelings of the losing horse in a race. My heart beat loudly as the drumming of a partridge, the whole forest seemed to reverberate with its quick thud, thud, thud, and the blood leaped to head and temples till my brain was in a whirl.

While the trees were dancing before my recling sight Lthought "What an unlucky wight am I! After twenty years of small-game shooting, to at last actually meet a bear in his haunts in the forest, get within thirty yards of him, on the point of gratifying one of the pet ambitions of my life, and then to bang away a couple-of-shots like a fool with the buck ague, while my noble quarry coolly makes off, and I am left empty-handed!"

Worse than that, the builte nuns away so slowly that George sees him again and again-keeps up with him, in fact.
Alas, my "too, too solid flesh !" Were La light, nimble fellow like George, I might have shot a bear-yes, a halfdozen times over. And then my gun. What a fool, to bring a little suipe gun into the woods in quest of the king of the forests, the beast before which all yer dat yer would hab made a break others quail, from the Atlantic to the for it yesself, Jedge, of nobody was Mississippi, and then to fire away at watchin' yer."-Texas Siftings.

this lordly game as I would pull trigger on a swoodcock to One bird missed, up flips another. But where shall I find another bear, when I have been all my life getting up with this first one? Then, if I had only shot him, what yarns I would spin to my sporting friends-

M. Le ivilei encores Here he is again sounded George's voice, loud and clear, through the forest, and cut short my roverio.

My heart stilled, and my brain steadied in an instant. Again I sprung forward, "I may get him yet; I may retrieve my fortunes," thought I, as I dragged, crawled and pushed myself ahead through the underbrush.

George hears me crashing along, and shouts from the mountain side : _ "He's makin' down by the lake. Right ahead o' ver. Look out for him.' I scramble on, impelled by one single, strong desire—to get one good, fair shot at that bear. I keep on and on. Not a word from leaves, I catch bright glimpses of the lake, sleeping in the sunlight. I slacken All is silent as a sanctuary. "Well, the bear is off, and George with him. I'll keep on slowly, cool off, and perhaps get my 'second wind' that we read about, whatever that may be." So thinking, I sling myself upon a fallen cedar that lay breast-high across my route, swing my legs over, sit and rest swift. I have not time to take a step. Had time allowed, there is no opportunity. The fallen cedar is at my back; I am pinioned between its branches. But no thought of retreat or dodging enters my mind. There is time but for one single Is in my right hand, both barrels full cock. Instantly I pitch it to my shoulder, yet in this instant the whole forest photographed on my sight. I see the beast leaving on all fours, hind-quarters high, fore-shoulders low, head down and askew, snout turned to right, lip curled up like a sparling dog, teeth chattering. and black eyes gleaming with a devilish light. On comes the monster with his vibrating, grunting growl, Knar-r-r-r! As the gun swings up to my face I glance along the barrels, and see the snapping teeth of the leaping brute within four feet of my gun-muzzle. I speed. fire. The beast falls forward with a heavy thud at my feet.

I lower my gun, and, with finger on the left trigger, press the muzzle against the monster's head. He moves not. Every fiber of my being thrills with a wild, intense delight.

"Dead!" I yell, with savage glee. And from up the mountain-side comes George's answering shout, "Brave, mon

SENATORIAL ORATORS.

Description of the Methods of Some of Cur. Distinguished Senators [From the Washington Republican.]

David Davis, perhaps, more than any other Senator, indulges in manuscript, preparing even a five-minute speech with great care. This is his inflexible rule, as it has been since he entered public life. After he delivers his speech es, or rather after he reads them, he hands his manuscript to Mr. Murphy, the Senate stenographer, who sends it to the Government Printing Office. The compositors never have any anothemas for the Judge's writing, which is large, distinct and full of character; Edmunds never uses notes, and once a speech is out of his mouth he doesn't bother his head about it. During all the years he has been in the Senate ho has not revised a single speech. He turns everything in his mind beforehand, and never rises to address the Senate without having weighed in the scales of his great mind what he intends saying.

George. At my right, through the Ben Hill will speak for three hours without using a scrap of paper. The only preparation he makes is marking references or passages in this book or that. I have seen him time and again thunder away for two hours without stopping even for a glass of water. He revises his speeches, however, makes additions and corrections in a clear hand, much like that of a college boy, and gives the printers little trouble with for a moment, then leisurely drop down his proof. Hill has an astounding memory, and no man in public life, except Edmunds, has such imperturbability. The only man who could well worry Hill or excite his wrath in debate was the late Matt Carpenter. How it tickled Carpenter to put some adroit question to the Georgian and get him confused-a hard thing to do at any time-but Carpenter often succeeded. And it was move the result of an irresistible propensity for impulse, and that is shoot. My gun fun than anything else, for never was man who had less malice than Matt Carpenter. He had a heart as big as a mountain. He was exceedingly particscene, with the on-dashing, black brute | ular about his speeches when they were in the center, is accurately and indelibly upon legal questions. After he got the proof from the foreman of the Record he would hack it to pieces, send the corrected proof back, get a second, and tseatitin like manner. His writing was characteristic, hard to read-a rollicking, harum-scarum sort of a fist and a study to the printers. He used to say "The shortest road is the best road when you are in a hurry," and, though he could write a fine, full, round hand, he dashed off everything at lightning

> Another Senator who, like Edmunds never revised a speech was Thurman. Occasionally he spoke from manuscript, but the stenographer took down every word he said; as the old gentleman would forget his manuscript and drift into extemporary cloquence. Thurman, though never a graceful speaker, was always forcible. Ho was, beyond alldoubt, the ablest-of the Democrats, and their leader from the time he entered the Senate.

Bayard works hard at his speeches and, though he writes them out and follows his manuscript closely, he revises after proof is taken He makes few changes, however, but holds the proof very often until 2 o'clock in the morning, as he spends his evenings generally social circles. He is a good penny writing a medium-sized running hand.

Lamar is a great reviser, cuts proof into tatters, writes a horrible hand, and tries the soul of a printer. Occasionally he goes down to the Government Printing Office to look after his speeches. which, when published, are vastly different from the stenographer's report of Senator Conkling seldom made a cores, and even his remarks in running ty. Of all the Senators Conkling writes the best hand-large, easy, graceful and obedient and faithful son, and the poor

James G. Blaine, when a member of the Senate, used to look carefully after his speeches, which, for the most part, were made from 'headings.' Probably there never was in the United States Senate a man who needed less preparation than Blaine. He is infallible in history and impregnable in debate. His memory of facts and faces is absolutely wonderful. He can begin with William the Conqueror and give you the name of every sovereign of England down to Victoria, with the dates of their reigns. Now and then the Senator would give his personal attention to the printing of a speech. Voorhees prepares his speeches care fully and revises moderately. He is one of the few, very few, men who use manuscript in such a way that not a single oratorical grace is diminished thereby. Whether this is because he commits his speech well to memory or not we never could tell. We rather think he does. But, with or without manuscript. Voorhees is an orator of the first school. As a rule, the very sight of manuscript in the hands of a speaker is enough to nerve one for a bore. Demosthenes was right when he said: "Oratory is delivery-delivery-deliveryery;" and delivery is killed by manu-dent, labors diligently at a speech. He is passionately fond of Edmund Burker and knows his works as we never know any other to know them. He has a memory equal to Blaine's or Ben Hill's, and time and again have we heard him repeat page after page of Burke's inmortal speeches. It is the same with the speeches of Phillips, Grattan, Curran and O'Connell. Jones is a very able man. His Democracy is extreme, but out of politics he is one of the best fel lows the world over.

Senator Beck, of Kentucky, is the most rapid talker in either house of Congress. Well for him that the Senate has such a stenographer as Denis Murphy, whose hand travels over paper like lightning. We doubt if his equal could be found anywhere. Beck is an untiring worker, has the constitution of a Kentucky racehorse, and no amount of labor is too heavy for him. Ho is not much of a reviser, going on the principle of Pontius Pilate-quod scripsi, scripsi. He is as blunt a Joey Bagstock and as good natured a Mark Tapley.

MANAGEMENT OF SICK CHILDREN.

The vicissitudes necessarily incident to an outdoor and primitive mode of life are never the first causes of any disease, though they may sometimes betray its presence. Bronchitis, nowadays perhaps the most frequent of all infantile ases, makes no exception to this rule; a draught of cold air may reveal the latent progress of the disorder, but its cause is long confinement in a vitiated and overheated atmosphere, and its proper remedy ventilation and a mild. phlegm-loosening (saccharine) diet, warm sweet milk, sweet oatmeal porridge or honey-water. Select an airy bedroom and do not be afraid to open the windows; among the children of the Indian tribes who brave in open tents the terrible winters of the Hudson Bay territory, bronchitis, croup and diphtheria are wholly unknown; and what we call " taking cold" might often be more correctly described as taking hot; glowing stoves, and even open fires in a night-nursery, greatly aggravate the pernicious effects of an impure atmosphere. The first paroxysm of croup can be promptly relieved by very simple remedies; fresh air and a rapid forward-and-backward movement of the arms, combined in urgent cases with the application of a flesh-brush (or a piece of flannel) to the neckt and the upper part of the chest. Paregoric and poppysirup stop the cough by lethargizing the irritability, and thus preventing the discharge of the phlegm till its accumulation produces a second and far more dangerous paroxysm. These second attacks of croup (after the administration of palliatives) are generally the fatal ones. When the child is convalcating, let him beware of stimulating food and overheated rooms. Do not give apertent medicines; costiveness, as an aftereffect of pleuritic affections, will soon vield to fresh air and a vegetable diet,-

GLADSTONE AND THE POOR BOY. On Mr. Gladstone's estate in Wales is poor charwoman. A charwoman is one employed by the day to do the most menial offices about a household. This charwoman, who is a widow, had an unruly son who gave her great trouble and sorrow. The poor mother thought that she might have some hope for her son if Mr. Gladstone would speak to him: As she met him one day she told her trouble to the Prime Minister. Expressing great sympathy for the mother, Mr. Gladstone asked her to send-her son to his study. When he made his appearnice the great man received him kindly, and talked to him as a father talks to

But before he said to the youth the special thing which he intended to say Mr. Gladstone proposed that they should first have a word of prayer together, to ask the guidance and assistance of Almighty God. Bowing down in his study, the man who has been twice Premier of England, on bended knees, plended earnestly with the Great Father in behalf of the wayward boy. THE SMALLEST WE'VE GOT.

An English paper tells this good story : "By virtue of certain, capitulations with the Sublime Porte, the United States, in common with other Governments, are entitled to keep a gun-boat in the Sea of Marmora for the carrying of dispatches, the protection of their citizens domiciled at Pera and Galata, and so forth. In the winter of the conference year, 1876, there arrived in the Dardanelles a magnificent American corvette—English sailors would call her a frigate—called the Vandalia. The Pasha of the castle of Europe was terribly disconcerted. He went on board the corvette and politely pointed out that under the capitulations the gunboats only of foreign powers were permitted to pass through the straits. It's the smallest we've got,' calmly replied the gallant commander of the Vandalia, and away steamed the big ship for Constantino ple.

SMELT LIKE CHARLEY'S MUSTACHE The old lady kept a private bottle from which she refreshed herself from time to time, as she felt the need, though none of the family knew it. One evening her daughter, in rummaging through the pantry for doughnuts for her bean, spied the bottle and had the enviosity to draw the cork and apply her nose to the aporture, at which moment the old lady hove in sight and angrily demanded:

"Well, are you any wiser-than you were? What do you suppose it is?" "I don't know what it is, mamma," answered the shrinking maiden, "but it

The good and staunch old stand-by, MEXICAN MUS-TANG LINIMENT, has done more to assuage pain, relieve suffering, and save the lives of men and beasts than all other liniments put together. Why? Because the Mustang pene-trates through skin and flesh to the very bone, driving out all pain and soreness and morbid secretions, and restor ing the afflicted part to sound and supple health.

"During my trip down the River Tagus, In Spain," said Captain Boyton to a representative of this journal in a recent feanversation by the year shore, "I had to 'shoot' 105 waterfalls, the Targest being about eighty-five feet, and immunerable rapida. Crossing the Straits of Messina, I had three ribs broken in a fight with sharks; and coming down the Somane, a river in France, I received a charge of shot from an excited and startled duntamum. Although this was not very pleasant and might be termed dangerous, I fear nothing more on my trip than intense cold; for, as 101g as Divilinis are free and easy and not remanged or benoushed I am all right. Before starting out I rub myself thoroughly with the article, and its action upon the mysels is wonderful. From constant exposure I fine somewhat subject to rheumatic pains, and nothing would ever benefit me until I got hold of this great German Remedy. Why, on my travels have met people who had been suffering with rheumatism for years; by my advice they used the Oil and it cred them. I would sooner do without food for days than be without his remementy for one hour. In fact I would not attempt a trip without it." The Captain became very entrustristic on the subject of Sr. Jacobs Oil, and when we left him he was still citing instances of the curative qualities of the Great German Remedy to a party around him.
